Lockheed Martin's Marietta, Ga. Site Celebrates 75 years of Manufacturing Excellence

[MARIETTA, GA] – June 7, 2026 – Lockheed Martin invites the press to join a celebration honoring the 75-year legacy of its Marietta, Georgia aerospace-defense manufacturing complex, June 17, 10:30 a.m.

Have a front row seat to the historic achievements, current capabilities and future promise of the site that has been home to the longest running military aircraft production line in history and remains a pivotal cornerstone of U.S. aerospace excellence. Keynote speakers will be announced at a later date.

“The men and women of Lockheed Martin proudly build aircraft and deliver capabilities that protect our nation and help ensure global security,” said Trish Pagan, vice president, Air Mobility & Maritime Missions and Marietta site general manager. “We’re celebrating 75 years of manufacturing excellence at our Marietta site. This is not just a look back; it’s a launchpad for the next generation of aerospace innovation.”

The Marietta facility consistently delivers the highest-quality aerospace products, from the proven C-130J Super Hercules to cutting-edge Skunk Works® technologies, and remains ready to meet the nation’s future defense needs.

More than 5,600 employees currently work at the Marietta plant, building the C-130J Super Hercules, and have delivered over 2,700 C-130 aircraft to more than 70 countries. The site also produces center-wing assemblies for the F-35, in addition to other projects.

In 2025, Lockheed Martin contributed $4.5 billion to the state’s economy and employees volunteered nearly 21,000 hours, reinforcing a strong partnership with metro Atlanta.
